Description: Chéticamp is the only harbour on the western shore that can accommodate deep-draught vessels. A twelve-foot channel has been dredged through the sandbar at the entrance to the harbour. A major expansion of the wharf at La Digue has taken place recently and construction is ongoing at the new marine facility (Chéticamp Marina) in the south end of the harbour, boasting a travel-lift that can handle boats up to 250 tonnes. Although this is an Acadian settlement, English is widely spoken, being a major tourist centre on the Cabot Trail. Most facilities can be found here.

Navigation: Range lights on Caveau Point provide approach guidance, and will bring you onto the well-buoyed channel through the sandbars at the entrance. Once past La Digue and the sandbar from extending from Chéticamp Island, good depths are found throughout the harbour until past Chéticamp Marina. There is ample room to anchor. Cruisers need not worry about entering during lobster season, though dockage may be scarce at that time. Charges for overnight dockage at La Digue and the Town wharf are quite expensive.
